

Elton Burlocks done his time... Twenty-six years for a terrible murder. Some of those years were hard, some easy. On the outside, he takes the only job he can find - the custodian of a local cemetery. It should be a simple job, keeping the grass tidy - giving the dead a haircut - but there are three black angels in the cemetery that wont let him rest. The first is a little girl who roams the night. There are two women, though, who are far worse. One is a vision of beauty in white, one a nightmare in black. When the killing starts, who can rock the restless dead back to sleep? There are no lullabies for the dead and if hes going to live, Eltons going to have to give the little girl what she wants. Then, maybe, he can find peace for them both - in the grave or out. A ghost story from the author of Masters of Blood and Bone, Rain, and The Love of the Dead. *Originally published by Grand Mal Press.
