

Tales from the Twentieth Century

A sleep-deprived computer technician fights to separate reality from fantasy. A hero travels to an impossible realm to face death itself to save a woman. A young pilot competes for the prestige of being the world's greatest flying ace. The drummer from a rock band contemplates the purpose of a romantic relationship. And a patient in a mental hospital contemplates his miserable life and the people and events that got him there. What is reality? What is love? What is a hero? What makes a relationship last? And what is insanity? Good questions, all... but more importantly, how are they answered in the modern world? Tales From The Twentieth Century is Jem Matzan's answer to these classic questions of human behavior.
