

The Night Is My Dominion

Lt. Derek Tawarrior is a homicide detective and former soldier living in post-apartheid South Africa. Though he still bears the scars of his Afrikaner lover's violent death, for Derek Apartheid is the past. At work he patiently deals with a desk sergeant who can talk the ears of an elephant and who likes opining on the merits (or lack of thereof) of candy coffee. Derek is smart and tends to be suspicious of any conclusion that he had to jump more than three feet to get to. However, what at first seems like a simple kidnap of a rich Afrikaner's daughter turns out to be a small piece of a wide-ranging and complex plot to destabilize the new South African government. Derek's cop instincts alert him. Slowly, a pattern emerges and Derek discovers that the author of the plot is a mysterious figure who calls himself the Resurrection Man. Once more, Derek begins to realize that the Resurrection Man is someone from his past. Indeed, Derek must ride out the pain of his past if he has any chance of catching the Resurrection Man. This story is as much about a man coping with a loss as it is about his struggle to bring a ruthless criminal to justice.
