

Love and Other Lethal Things

Bountiful and daring, honest and wickedly entertaining! John Smelcer, Poetry Editor, Rosebud K.R. Copeland is a Medusa. Her gaze is not meant to soothe and her poetry is not for the faint-of-heart. Love and Other Lethal Things is muscular and beautiful as a python, as the snakes adorning Medusas crown. You will enjoy hardening. Larissa Shmailo, author of #specialcharacters K.R. Copelands poems often revel in the body and bawdy, taking delight in wicked wordplay and disturbing imagery. Yet beneath the graveyard ghoulery beats a sensitive heart attuned to the perils of love, the pulses of the natural world, and the wellsprings of the spirit. Copeland gives us pangs and pleasures we will not forget. Kevin Durkin, author of Los Angeles in Fog Love and Other Lethal Things is Copelands wild, far-ranging elegy to what dwells in the darkest recesses of a hearts private chambers. Its alternating Hindu slant and intimate fantasy of selves and lovers slain presses hard on the throttle, taking us into the curves of longing. By turns intimate, often confessional, and surely prayerful in their connective tissue, these poems shout out to all who read them: LIVE. And is that not exactly what we want poetry to do for us? We read to know that we are indeed fit to breathe, to ponder daily the longings that keep us from being interchangeable, poseable, smiling faces, hiding our hearts from this life.
